To Prevent War.

To the Editor of The Evening Star: The naval historian, J. Fenimore Cooper, in the closing paragraph of his history of the navy makes a statement that is applicable to the case in 1865. At that period we were strong sitions of charletans.

In his concluding remarks he said that the In his concluding remarks he said that the and respected by all nations. From time to able to the dignity of a great nation: this was defeated. Men in Congress said that there would be no more war. One Senator made the very arkable statement, "that the moral effect mony would deter any other nation from mo-lesting it. Also that if a raft with the American flag were sent adrift on the ocean all the world would respect it." This is a good time to test that policy. Here we have Chile with only 3,000,000 inhabitants, and so far from re-specting said raft and flag they treat it with the utmost contempt. The only way to have this raft respected would be to have behind it 100 steel-clad battle ships. If immediately after the Ealtimore insult to our flag we could have sent fifteen ships of the Ealtimore class and six battle ships to the harbor of Valparaiso and demanded an apology it would have been given with a commendable promptness. This line of action would have been taken by either England or France if their flag had been lished in today's Star Senators Kyle and Peffer make statements in regard to the controversy with Chile that are apt to mislead. and secretary of the executive committee. An excursion to Monticello on Jefferson's birth-day, April 12, was agreed upon and a committee of arrangements, who will select a prominent orator for the occasion, was appointed. An important project, which met with great favor, is the establishment of a bureau for the zens to go unpunished.

I doubt very much if the Chilean government will offer any sort of an apology that will be ac-ceptable to the President and his cabinet. The mass of the people of that country believe that they are fully able to hold their own against the United States. In fact it is a well-known boast that they think that one Chilean is equal to any ten Yankees. The only way to convince them of this error is the stern logic of battle. If war follows the present controversy we will spend, no doubt, several hundred minion dollars and sacrifice thousands of brave lives. If one-tenth of this sum had been spent ten years ago in building up a proper navy the present war topic would not have come up. The late Gen. Grant and Admiral Porter repeatedly stated that the only way to prevent a war was to be so thoroughly prepared for it that no nation would dare attack up. hat no nation would dare attack us January 20. The Cruel Check Rein.

To the Editor of The Evening Star: My attention was called to an editorial in today's STAR on legislative action in regard to docking horses, and I beg to submit a plea on behalf of a more cruel indiction-the overdraw. A window in the hotel where I make my home overlooks a livery stable, from which I see sent out every day horses with their heads drawn into unnatural positions and driven by inhu-man drivers for hours without any relief. I wish it were in my power to place in the hands of every man guilty of such brutal treatment a copy of The Stan of the 9th instant, containing the cut of the horse's invention for man, and am sure any one who stops to think a mo-ment will ask himself the same question: "Why not one as well as the other?" Having been a not one as well as the other?" Having been a close observer of men and horses I am justified in saying that a man's real character may be estimated by his treatment of horses without failure in any case. Washington, D. C., January 20, 1892.

My own mother's services were long sought after in numerous instances, often miles from her wikierness home in northern Ohio, to inform farmers and others where wells of water could be found. She employed a green two-prongedrod for this purpose, and her decision as to the proper location never proved a failure. THE UNCERTAINTY OF CONCLUSIONS.

The Subject Discussed by Prof. Mendenhall Before the Philosophical Society. About two hundred people gathered in the lecture hall of the Columbian University last evening to hear the annual address of the retiring president of the Philosophical Society, Prof. T. C. Mendenhall of the coast survey. The topic of his paper, the delivery of which occupied about half an hour, was "The Uncertainty of Conclusions." The speaker was introduced by Prof. G. K. Gilbert.

Prof. Mendenhall opened his discourse by citing an interesting case of judicial conviction of 1711/4 votes Miss Anthony had 1211/4, and to continue this satisfactory state of affairs it is dence, the conclusions of which were afterward proven to be wholly false through a confession by the real murderer. He paid some humorous attention to the formation of a new industry and alluded wittily to the organiza-tion in the west of the "Interstate Artificial Rain Company, limited." In his discussion of the character of the anti-drought propaganda he remarked that it was a noteworthy fact that most of the public benefactors who had allied themselves to the movement were designated as professors, who did not adhere so closely to their lines of science that they found it inconsistent with their professional attainments to do the county sprinkling at so much per acre. TO FORM A HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

There has been some talk among those intersted in the Georgetown of years gone by of forming an historical society, whose main object will be to secure from the towns throughout Maryland and Virginia and wherever they may exist the scattered records, old maps, early newspapers and other things of a histori-cal nature relating to the town and to preserve them in the rooms of the society with other historical documents that from time to time will make their appearance. Local relics of all descriptions will be collected and officers periodically chosen to care for them. It is urged that such a society would receive earnest support from the best people of the place. A Growl About the Cable Cars.

To the Editor of The Evening Star: Will you allow a growler to growl? The 7th street cable line is the finest in the city and in the days of its youth was liberally supplied with cars much to its patrons' delight But a change has come about. The travel has grown immensely, but the accommodations have stood as still as a monument. Between 8 and 9 a.m. and from 4 to 5 p.m. there are not cars sufficient to hold half the travel, even when the grip cars are used. Men who are almost ill are forced to ride on the open cars and the grip or pneumonia have been the result in many cases, The company is known to have sufficient stock to maintain a double service of closed cars and they should be compelled by public sentiment to do so between the hours mer tioned.

LE DROIT PARK.

The Fish Market.

Owing to the severity of the weather the persons who have winter seines in operation down the river have been unable to do much recently and the result of the hauls have hardly paid expenses. Further down the river, in the vicinity of the bay, the fishermen have had better luck and large shipments of fish have been made. The principal fish caught there is trout and there are plenty of them on the benches in the market, and they are selling at 15 and 20 shad from Savannah, Ga., which sell from 40 cents to $1 each, and the fish are of extra fine quality for this early in the season. Black bass are also being received in large numbers and are selling at from 1234 to 20 cents a pound, while rock fish or striped bass bring from 20 to
